Understanding Form 1099-DIV:

- A form used by financial institutions to report dividends and other distributions to shareholders and the IRS.

You will not receive Form 1099-DIV if:

- You received payments of dividends aggregating less than $10 and there was no tax withholding on those payments.
- You have submitted a valid Form W8 to EQ proving a foreign tax certification status.
- If you are not eligible to receive Form 1099-DIV, your Q4 statement will have the following messaging:

  Internal Revenue Code §6042 requires tax reporting to each party receiving payments of dividends aggregating $10 or more during a calendar year. Beginning 2021, if you received payments aggregating less than $10, except if there is withholding, you will not receive Form 1099-DIV.

Why am I not receiving Form 1099-DIV?

- Internal Revenue Code §6042 requires tax reporting to each US citizen receiving payments classified as a dividend which aggregates to $10 or more during a calendar year.
- Beginning tax year 2021, if you have received payments aggregating less than $10 and have no tax withholding, you will not receive Form 1099-DIV.
Can I still request a Form 1099-DIV or opt in to getting a 1099-DIV?

- No, you can find the sum of your dividends on the last quarterly statement mailed of the year or by accessing your account on shareowneronline.com
  Select View All Accounts, then select View all dividends

- Yes, it will be on your last statement of the year and available online.

Am I still responsible to report my dividend income?

- Yes, it is still to be reported on your tax return even though the Payer of dividend income is not required to furnish a statement to you.

How will I know if I am under the reporting threshold?

- This information will be on your last statement of the year and available online.

Will backup withholding on dividends below the threshold be reported?

- Yes, if there is any withholding on account then the income and withholding will be reported on Form 1099-DIV.

Does this affect foreign shareowners?

- No, if you have a valid Form W8 on file with EQ, you will not receive Form 1099-DIV but will instead receive Form 1042-S reporting your tax income disbursed by EQ. The reporting threshold on Form 1042-S is $0.50.
